Digital Sanborn® Maps, 1867-1970™

Historical fire insurance maps for thousands of communities in the U.S. No maps are consulted more in libraries than Sanborn® fire insurance maps—detailed property and land-use records for more than 12,000 U.S. towns and cities across a century of change. ■ The maps provide a wealth of information, such as building outline, size and shape, construction materials, height, building use, windows and doors, street and sidewalk widths, boundaries, house numbers, construction materials, out-buildings, and more. ■ Factories are labeled with the owner's name, as well as the products manufactured there. In large industrial and commercial buildings, even individual rooms and their uses are recorded. Also depicted are pipelines, railroads, wells, water mains, dumps, and heavy machinery likely to affect the property's vulnerability to disaster. ■ Combined with other references—city directories, photographs, small-scale maps, census records, genealogies, and statistical data—the Sanborn maps provide an unparalleled picture of life in American towns and cities. ■ Maps are accessible by state and community. Users can pinpoint the streets, landmarks, and other places noted in the map index. Maps can be manipulated, expanded, printed, and downloaded.
